

The quality of XM radio's diverse programming should serve as a model, not a target, for the NAB. In this era of the "dumbing down of America," XM is about the only medium I enjoy. I haven't watched television for a dozen years, and most mainstream movies are inane or too violent for my taste. With XM, I can select from over 100 channels, each with narrow parameters. As a result, I enjoy just about everything I hear on the channels I choose. No screaming DJs. No obscenities. No hollering commercials for speedways.

Please don't interfere or limit this wonderful offering. It's a bright light in an increasingly dim field.

Thank you.
